MISCELLANEOUS READING.

VALUE OF WIT. We take the following excellent passage from a review of "The Autocrat," in "The Century," a weekly paper recently estab lished in New York: "A wit is a priceless man for a community; not a scandel-monger, a heel biter, a detrator, a cynic, whose own happiness in life being spoilt is bent upon making others miserable, but a genial, benevolent reformer, a wholesome and winning though caustic survevor of events. People breathe more freely when they know there is such a man in the ascendant, for wicked men will be afraid of him, weak men will strive to be stronger, and quacks will not have it all their own way. Society is continually in need of the exploits of that knight errant, the wit. Evils ereep in unawares; some good, but very foolish man prepetrates a good deal of nonsense which is tolerated and even admited by virtue of his goodness, and fixed as an institution before its inconvenience is fully suspected. Honest sentiments with errors sticking to them are gradually heaped up into a monstrous aggregate of prejudice. Some bloated and overfed truth weighs society down like a hugo nightmare, till the wit comes along to tickle the sensorium and wake us up once more into 400 are 3,000 daylight with a sensation of free honest liv-300 are 400 ling, or the old moralities of the word get dull 150 are 5,500 and commonplace, worn, trite, and battered, the effigies nearly of them. The wit is a general refurbisher, recasting the old coin and presenting it to us again current with the image of to-day."

A HORSE ANECDOTE.

A Canadian friend of ours was telling us the other day how he managed to break a favorite horse of his of one trick, that of breaking his halter whenever he was fastened in the stable. Our friend placed the animal in question in a stable that stood exactly on the edge of a high bluff some thirty feet above the St. Lawrence. As usual, so soon as he was left alone, our pony broke his halter, backed out of the stable door, and, as a necessary consequence, tumbled heels over head into the river, disappearing below the surface with the impetus and gravitation of his fall. He was next seen swimming for dear life, and heading in shore. He landed in a dripping condition, and was easily secured. Doubtless he pondered gravely over the lesson, forever afterward he never made the slightest attempt to break his halter. The philosophy of deal ing with horses, and perhaps with nobler vices. If your pony has a trick of backing, back him a quarter of a mile; if he stops, tie him to the place for from twelve to twenty four hours without food or water, and he will be glad to obey you when you next call on him. At least so say our Canadian authority .- Advocate and Journal.

OUR MUSICAL FRIEND. WEEKLY publication of SHEET MUSIC. A WEEKLY publication of SHEET MUSIC.

Suitable for the players and singers of the Home circle, and consisting of sixteen pages full folio size, stitched in a handsome cover. It contains that the popular taste demands; never too difficult
